The Editorial Board and staff would like to thank the authors and readers of SKIN: The Journal of Cutaneous Medicine for helping the journal reach more than 1 million reads. Since its founding in 2017, SKIN has been dedicated to providing an enhanced route to disseminating new dermatologic knowledge covering all aspects of cutaneous disease. We are grateful to all of the authors and contributors for making each issue over the past six years educational and informative. We would also like to thank the entire dermatologic and broader medical community for the submission of articles to SKIN and for trusting the journal as a source of new and important dermatologic information.

Publication of this journal would not be possible without the support and sponsorship of the National Society for Cutaneous Medicine, as well as the previous managing editors over the past six years (Nicholas Brownstone, MD, Justin Marson, MD, Graham Litchman, DO, MS, Ryan Svoboda, MD, MS, Alex Glazer, MD, and Aaron Farberg, MD). SKIN is committed to making its literature available to all and to maintaining authors' publishing abilities without any cost. Our team continues to be devoted to rapidly publishing high-quality articles on a wide variety of topics within the field of dermatology and we look forward to doing so for many years to come.
